This course prepares students for oral communication of a research paper and critical overview that will follow a research agenda.

OBJETIVOS

Objetivos específicos aportados por el profesorado (2017-18)

The objective is to make students to highlight the most important results in a given paper, to offer a critical view of the results, to be able to transmit the main insights of the paper to an audience not familiar with the topic and to convince the experts in the topic that he/she controls the technical details of the paper and can contribute with a new research agenda.

Students should be able to present the paper in different formats: In a 20-25 mins presentation, which is what speakers usually have in a conference; in 1h to 1h:30, which is the time that they will have in a job market presentation or in an invited seminar; in 10 mins which is the time that a job market candidate will have in an interview.

CONTENIDOS

Contenidos teóricos y prácticos (2017-18)

Students should:

- Attend research seminars

- Chose two papers from the list offer by the professor and present the paper in the different formats mentioned above and offer an original follow up ressearch.

EVALUACIÓN

Instrumentos y criterios de Evaluación 2017-18

The grade of this course will be based on the different presentations of the two papers and the follow up ideas for a new research agenda.

Those students with a final grade below 5 will have a second opportunity in the corresponding exam period where a new paper designated by the professor has to be presented. The final grade in this second opportunity will be the average between the best of the two presentations during the course and the grade of this final presentation.
